A Long Run Home Jun 05 2020 Jack Walker was most content outdoors, especially near the lush green fields of Seals Stadium and Fenway Park or his neighbors' perfectly manicured lawns. He finally got his dream job, mowing the Molders' lawn, not long after a heart attack felled Mr. Molder in his living room. But the job ended abruptly when Jack learned that a fellow left-handed pitcher, a veteran major leaguer, had mowed off one of his toes. Jack's baseball career also ended abruptly. "Great job, Lefty," said his coach, after his first outing of the season, which happened to be his team's final game. "I'll use you a lot more next year." "I'm a senior, Coach." "Well, you certainly pitched like one today." And then there were schools, horses and girls, including one whose father prowled around like a bear.

With the help of Charlie, her adopted father, they develop her small ranchette to the point where she can at least raise and feed a few head of livestock. Her peace and solitude come to an abrupt end when through a strange twist of events, badly wounded and bleeding Dick Ferrell comes into her life. While nursing him back to health, Dick and Ann fall hopelessly in love and Ann is most happy to give up both her peace and solitude for Dick's love and the happy years of marriage which follow. They come to a sudden end when Dick is falsely accused of having adulterous affair. When Ann hears of it, broken hearted and weeping she runs off into a bitter cold Montana winter night and collapse onto the snow covered ground. Dick finds her and again declares his innocence which Ann accepts just in the nick of time.

Motorized Obsessions Apr 03 2020 2008 Outstanding Academic Title, Choice Magazine From dirt bikes and jet skis to weed wackers and snowblowers, machines powered by small gas engines have become a permanent—and loud—fixture in American culture. But fifty years of high-speed fun and pristine lawns have not come without cost. In the first comprehensive history of the small-bore engine and the technology it powers, Paul R. Josephson explores the political, environmental, and public health issues surrounding one of America's most dangerous pastimes. Each chapter tells the story of an ecosystem within the United States and the devices that wreak havoc on it—personal watercraft (PWCs) on inland lakes and rivers; all-terrain vehicles (ATVs) in deserts and forests; lawn mowers and leaf blowers in suburbia. In addition to environmental impacts, Josephson discusses the development and promotion of these technologies, the legal and regulatory efforts made to improve their safety and environmental soundness, and the role of owners' clubs in encouraging responsible operation. Synthesizing information from medical journals, recent environmental research, nongovernmental organizations, and manufacturers, Josephson's compelling history leads to one irrefutable conclusion: these machines cannot be operated without loss of life and loss of habitat.

Extract: The objectives of this study were to 1) assess registered snowmobilers' awareness of and attitudes toward the management of the Snowmobile Trail Tax Fund; 2) estimate the past and project future recreational use of snowmobiles in North Dakota; 3) identify the socioeconomic characteristics of registered snowmobile owners; and 4) collect and interpret the self-assessed attitudes of registered snowmobilers concerning the enforcement of machine registration. This information will assist in the efficient allocation of snowmobile trail tax monies, provide a replication of a study 10 years earlier, and aid in the overall management of winter outdoor recreation.
